Barcelona

Antoni Gaudí designed Casa Milà (1906-1912), his last secular work – an apartment block – one of the most innovative in functional terms, spatial distribution, structural system, and in construction and ornamental methods. The building features a language very innovative in Modernisme period, expressed mainly by the sinuous and quasi-naturalistic forms the façade, in which the stone contrasts with the daring railings of the balconies. The visit includes the spectacular roof, the Espai Gaudí – the only interpretative center of Gaudí's life and work– and a period Apartment.
